on human rights education

Volume 2

This human rights education material collection is in support of the UN DECADE FOR HUMAN RIGHTS EDUCATION 1995-2004

HRE/EO/CR/36

PREFACE

In 1994, the United Nations General Assembly declared 1995-2004 the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education (UNDHRE). The following year, ARRC produced the ARRC Resource Collection on Human Rights Education volume one.

Since 1995, human rights education has grown significantly in the Asia-Pacific region. ARRC has been in a position to monitor this growth through the process of compiling information that was included in A Directory of Asia and the Pacific Organizations Related to Human Rights Education Work (1999) and more recently, the ARRC Resource Material Collection on Human Rights Education volume two (2000). There appears to be growth in the number of organizations involved in human rights education work and producing materials.

ARRC believes that human rights education is crucial for making people aware of their rights and mobilizing them to struggle for the protection and realization of these rights. Exchanging human rights education materials through catalogues such as this one further enhances human rights education and hopefully peoples desire to promote, protect and realize their rights. The aim of the collection is to share the vast wealth of ideas and experiences in human rights education and related concerns with human rights educators throughout the region. ARRC hopes that this process of sharing will improve the quality of human rights education and the number of people involved in building a culture of human rights in the future.

ARRC's Resource Materials Collection on Human Rights Education volume two provides brief descriptions of human rights education materials and the contact details of the organizations producing them. The collection features practical teaching manuals, country reports, conference proceedings, journals and newsletters, directories and catalogues, and other useful resources.

We hope you find this catalogue a useful tool in your search for human rights education materials.

ARRC Coordinator

INTRODUCTION

Teaching manuals are practical guides for teachers, trainers, facilitators and community development workers. Teaching manuals are designed to help put human rights education into action.

These materials have been divided into sub-categories to help guide your search.

- Formal teaching materials are designed for use by teachers and students in schools. These materials may be integrated into pre-existing school curriculums or used as part of extra-curricular activities.
- Non-formal teaching materials are for use by trainers, facilitators, activists and community development workers in non-formal education settings. The target group for these materials includes marginalized groups, community groups, NGOs and the general public.
- General learning materials may be used in a variety of contexts in either formal or non-formal educational settings. Teaching materials designed to be used with government officials, law enforcers and journalists feature in this section. Illustrated texts and picture books form the bulk of this chapter.

Country reports provide in depth description and analysis of the human rights situation in twenty countries in the Asia region. Given the quantity of country reports being produced at any one time, these reports have been divided into the following sub-regions: South Asia, Southeast Asia and Northeast Asia. Country reports cover racial, religious and gender discrimination, domestic violence, trafficking in women and children, migrant labour, child labour, bonded labour, internally displaced people and refugees, the impact of censorship laws and alternative education systems.

Conference proceedings include reports of seminars, workshops and training sessions related to human rights education or human rights held in the region in the last five years. Conference proceedings that include a sizable number of training materials have been incorporated into the section on teaching manuals.

Journals and newsletters refer to regularly published materials that provide brief updates on activities and issues of concern related to human rights and human rights education in the Asia-Pacific region.

Directories and catalogues refer to dense collections of information that will help you find more resources on human rights and human rights education. In addition to catalogues and directories this section includes annotated bibliographies and human rights film festival guides.

Other useful resources include reference materials for human rights education and international human rights instruments, such as conventions, covenants and declarations. Illustrated versions of important human rights documents may be found with the general learning materials.

Please refer to volume one of the ARRC Resource Material Collection on Human Rights Education for information on human rights education materials produced between 1990-1995.

To obtain copies of materials listed in this catalogue please contact the relevant organizations directly. ■

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Asian Regional Resource Center for Human Rights Education would like to express its sincerest thanks to the following people:

- Ms Katherine Fisher for coordinating the whole project including collection and recording of materials, writing of annotation on each material, and editing the whole collection. This project would not have been possible without her dedication, attention and focus. ARRC is very grateful to her.
- Mr. Jim Shnookal for his unwavering commitment to proof reading and editing this collection often at short notice.
- Ms Theresa J. Limpin for collecting materials, editing drafts and for her moral support.
- Mr. Jefferson Plantilla for his clarity on the structure of the resource collection and his contribution to the final editing process.
- Mr. Phillip Stuckey for his technical assistance and moral support.
- All the people who interpreted and translated information for the collection including:
Krishna Prasad Upadhyaya, Park Eun Sil, Pongsak Chan-on, Siriporn Pornlaksanacharoen, Soe Pai, Theresa J. Limpin.

Many thanks to all organizations that generously donated materials to this project.

Sincere appreciation is extended to those individuals and organizations who are not only working in human rights education but have also taken the time to share their experiences through the production of human rights education materials.

Special thanks is given to our sponsors, for believing in our projects and for providing funding to make this project happen:

- Human resource development support by AUSTRALIAN VOLUNTEERS INTERNATIONAL (AVI).
- Technical Equipment grant by CANADA FUND, THE CANADIAN EMBASSY, BANGKOK, THAILAND
- Research grant by NORWEGIAN HUMAN RIGHTS FUND (NHRF)
- Material Publication grant by SOUTHEAST ASIA FUND FOR INSTITUTIONAL AND LEGAL DEVELOPMENT (SEAFILD). ■

EDUCATION FOR LIFE: A COURSE IN VALUES AND RELATIONSHIPS

1998, 47 & 27pp.....English

"The Education for Life Course asks us to reflect on the choices for our actions and to consider the implications of our actions. In some way we hope that the conscious choices that we make will be reasoned convictions and not merely emotional reactions to the pressures around us. The Education for Life Program is aimed at meeting this challenge."

-The Maryknoll Sisters, 1998.

This self-discovery course for young people is comprised of two manuals; the first contains worksheets to be used by young course participants, whilst the second manual is designed to help trainers stimulate discussion with the participants and focus on the objectives of each lesson.

It is of importance to note that both manuals shift their focus from human rights violations to how to channel anger, fear and forgiveness.

DEVELOPMENT AND DEMOCRACY: PHILIPPINES' QUEST FOR THE NEXT CENTURY

By JEFFERSON R. PLANTILLA & MASAKI YOKOYAMA.

1998, 71pp.....English

This is a report on a research on CALABARZON, an area declared by the Philippine government as a special economic zone. The report focuses on the legal support for realizing human rights in the context of social development, and the case study on CALABARZON. The report argues that social development and respect for human rights even if supported by laws and government programs will remain unrealized as long as economic development is the only primary goal of government. CALABARZON is an example of how economic development will not necessarily lead to social development, much less realization of human rights.

RURAL UNREST IN VIETNAM

1997, 16pp.....English

In 1986 the Vietnamese government launched an economic rejuvenation process known as doi moi. After ten years of growth, the economy started to contract and social and political unrest emerged. Rural Vietnamese had grown tired of corruption among local party and government officials, loss of land due to industrialization, depressed rice prices and taxation. The government responded to this crisis by enhancing its tools of control, namely "administrative detention" for those suspected for "counter-revolutionary" offenses, increased censorship of press and severely limiting the right to association. This report provides insight into both the social unrest and government responses to the unrest outlined above.
